

A computer was asked to draw the shoreline of the lake which would form behind the Kaibab Upwarp if the Grand Canyon were blocked at the 5,700-foot elevation. The lake which would form is shown above. It would contain the water of three Great Lakes. This computer-generated lake approximates the outline of the ancient lake which breached its dam to form Grand Canyon.